

Localism should be encouraged and accepted in all media markets. Local media markets have long been neglected; unless of course you live in a large metropolitan area, local programming is what makes media most viable to people.